POLICE HUNT PIRATES AND MISSING MAN

Wife of Stanford, Conn.,

HUSBAND MURDERED
Child Is Found Drifting On Father's Yacht

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Police of two states swept Long Island sound and the surrounding country by airplanes, speed boat and automobile today in a gigantic man hunt for Benjamin P. Collings of Stamford, Conn., believed murdered aboard his cruiser, Penguin Wednesday night.

At sun-up this morning members of the United States life station at Hell's Gate picked up the "Oh Boy," a 35-foot cabin cruiser with lines similar to the ill-fated Penguin. She was drifting abandoned. Aboard her was found a woman's kimono and dress of excellent quality. The license number of the yacht is K 8649 and her owner is registered as Charles Benhart, of New York.

Police immediately added it to the cloud of clues which are piling up to becloud the solution of this horrible mystery which began when Collings' yacht was boarded by two pirates who threw him overboard, took his wife Lillian away in a small boat and criminally attacked her, and left his five-year-old daughter, Barbara, drifting with the "pirated" Penguin through the night.

While Nassau county police prepared to take the clothing to Mrs. Collings for identification, news was flashed here of the mysterious disappearance of Herman P. Chelius, 33, former director of the Boston conservatory of music and father of Mrs. Collings. Chelius disappeared from a hotel at Rock Island, R. I., ten days ago where he was spending his vacation. He left without communicating with his two sisters, Rose E. and Helen Chelius of Dorchester, Mass. Yesterday they asked the police to search for him. The old man was reported to have said he was "catching a boat for New London" but no trace of him has been found in that city.

LE BOURGET, France, Sept. 11.—France's sensational long distance non-stop air race pattered out into a one-plane affair today when Jacques Codos and Sergeant Robida were forced down at Dusseldorf, Germany, by motor failure, according to report received here.

LE BOURGET, France, Sept. 11.—A long-distance non-stop airplane race, the first of its kind in history, got under way today with the almost simultaneous departure of two teams of noted French fliers for Tokyo.

The first away were Marcel Doret, Joseph Lebrun and Rene Mesmin in the monoplane "Hyphen II." Eight minutes later Jacques Codos and Sergeant Robida took off in the "Question Mark," the veteran machine in which Captain Dieudonne Coste went from Paris to New York last year.

Both teams of fliers hoped to beat the non-stop, straight line flight record now held by Russell Boardman and John Polando, the American airmen who flew from New York to Istanbul, Turkey, covering over 5,000 miles without a stop.

They chose Tokyo as their destination, intending to fly as far as their planes would carry them. 8 MINUTES APART

In view of a scant handful of persons who gathered at the air field in the early hours of the morning, Doret and Lebrun shot away from Le Bourget at 6:08 a. m. (12 a. m. Eastern Standard Time). At 6:15 a. m. (12 a. m. E. S. T.), Codos and Robida opened their throttle and sped down the long runway after their rivals.

The fliers had been preparing for their attempted record-breaking journeys ever since the Boardman-Polando flight, which bettered the record of 4,912 miles previously established by Captain Coste and Maurice Bellonte, his navigator, in a jump from Paris to Manchuria. Coste and Bellonte Continued on Page Eight.

SCHOOL LEADERS SUMMONED BY SKINNER TO STUDY POLICIES

Some Ohio Schools Face Danger of Losing First Class Charters and Membership in Association by Reducing Terms Below Nine Months and Cutting Salaries.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11.—Behind the scenes the danger of losing their treasured first class charters because they reduced terms or cut salaries, many Ohio schools also have to surrender their prized membership in the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools, it was learned here today.

The loss of membership in the association would deprive thousands of high school graduates of the right of entering leading colleges and universities without taking an entrance examination.

Answering a question which has alarmed scores of school leaders in Ohio, officials of the association have notified the state department of education they doubt whether the depression is yet serious enough to cause the association to change its standard which requires all its member schools to conduct nine month terms.

Hitting a second blow at Ohio schools which have taken steps toward economy, the association indicated that it will continue to frown upon schools which pay salaries of less than $1,200.

Although an attempt to draw up a definite policy regarding charters will be made by Dr. Beverly O. Skinner, state director of education, at a meeting of county superintendents here Sept. 28, the Ohio leaders of the North Central Association will not meet again until March.

County superintendents were summoned to the meeting by Director Skinner because existing rules require that all first class charter schools hold school for nine months.

Whether the rule will be strictly enforced, causing the revocation of charters of those schools which cut their terms to save money, will probably be decided at the meeting.

Much Damage Thought
Done In Porto Rico

(By International News Service)
Two tropical storms of hurricane intensity were sweeping widely separated areas in the Caribbean today after killing probably 200 persons in British Honduras and carving considerable damage in Porto Rico.

It was feared that both storms might do more damage and cause even greater loss of life especially the one which struck Porto Rico. Santo Domingo is directly in the path of this disturbance and may suffer damage from it, meteorologists pointed out.

The storm which struck Honduras last night was reported to have passed into the Bay of Campeche and to be diminishing in intensity.

In its wake however it left a city in ruins and according to one report, under several feet of water. Communication with the outside world was almost entirely severed but a few messages of the devastation came through.

One was from Biddier Masson, manager of the Pan American Airways, who estimated that 200 persons had met death in the hurricane. Biddier said that the wind which was moving at 90 to 100 miles an hour had destroyed his radio masts and that to get his message through he had to set up a flag.

DUNLAP TALKS TO ROTARIANS

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Describes Conditions of Farms.

Renick W. Dunlap, prominent Pickaway countyman, who now occupies an important niche in Washington D. C.'s official circles, through his official position as assistant director of agriculture in President Hoover's cabinet, addressed local Rotarians at their meeting at the Boggs Hotel Thursday noon. He was the guest of Charles H. May.

Mr. Dunlap, who recently returned with his family from a trip to Alaska, described agricultural conditions not only in the United States but in foreign countries including Germany, Holland, Denmark and England. He described wheat producers through the western states, who producing the crop on a larger scale realized a profit when wheat was selling as low as 30 cents a bushel.

He said he had studied the world over and that in all his travels found no place more suitable than the Scioto Valley.

John H. Dunlap and John H. Dunlap Jr., of Williamsport, attended the meeting as guests.

Guards Halt Church Fight

JONESBORO, Ark., Sept. 11.—New outbreaks in Jonesboro's religious controversy were prevented today as National Guardsmen patrolled the streets.

Troops were on guard near the huge tent, where 5,000 persons gathered last night to hear an evangelist, the Rev. Joe Jeffers, preach on "Law and Order."

The Rev. Jeffers came to the tent after leading about 500 of his followers into city court in protest against the trial of one of his followers, who was charged with attacking a member of the Baptist church congregation.

When the 500 started to sing hymns, Mayor Bosler objected. Then the preacher began to pray. Finally the mayor interrupted him and blows were exchanged.

STORE TO CLOSE

Bothman's store will be closed from Friday evening to Monday in observance of holiday.

Mayor Asks Observance Of Drivers

As school begins next week, all motorists and pedestrians are asked to be careful, careful as a pedestrian and careful when you are behind the wheel. As a motorist you have noticed stop signs about the streets of our city, at important street crossings, at railroad crossings. These are placed there, not for ornamental purpose, but because they have a message for you. To ask you to obey them seems foolish, but the fact that many motorists forget to obey these at times, make this request a reasonable one after all.

The motorist must always bear in mind that the whole responsibility for mishaps, in which children are injured rest upon them. Legally he cannot be absolved, but morally he cannot be. Adopt a policy of halting your car at all intersections or at least slow down. Always be willing to concede the right-of-way to the other fellow, even if it is yours, rather than take a chance of a collision.

B. T. Hedges,
Mayor, City of Circleville.

8 FLYERS TO TRY PACIFIC

Undaunted By Apparent Fate of Allen and Moyle Seeking Prize Money.

(BULLETIN)
TOKYO, Sept. 11.—Seiji Yoshikawa, often called the "Japanese Lindbergh," quitted near the Kunitomura airbase today while returning from a fruitless air search for the American trans-Pacific fliers, Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, who are missing.

First reports did not state whether Yoshikawa had been injured.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 11.—Despite the fact that Cecil A. Allen and Don Moyle, missing Japan to Seattle fliers, had apparently come to grief, eight aviators in the past two days announced intentions of trying for the $28,000 prize offered by Seattle for the first non-stop flight between Seattle and Tokyo, it was revealed here today by W. W. Conner, governor of the Washington Aeronautical Association.

The name of the only aviator to be made public by Conner was that of C. E. B. Schaeffer, Chicago, who wired asking if the prize money offered was still open.

Meanwhile another day had passed without any definite information concerning the fate of Allen or Moyle, who took off from Japan on Monday for the long fight over the tempestuous north Pacific.

Aviation experts were skeptical of reports that an airplane had been heard over the Aleutian Islands on Tuesday. They likewise placed little credence in a report that a plane which might have been that of Allen and Moyle had been heard 200 miles north of Whitehorse, Yukon.

Hope that the missing aviators would ever be found alive dwindled today, though directing heads of various agencies continued to do what they could in conducting a search.

WRECK BASIS OF LAW SUIT

Circleville Motors Asks $1,000
For Damages in Wreck
On July 29.

An automobile accident on the Florence Chapel Turnpike, near the Red River bridge July 29, is the outgrowth of a $1,000 money suit filed in common pleas court Friday. The Circleville Motors Co., has filed action for money against Thomas and Sarah Martin of Ashville.

The plaintiff was owner of a Reo automobile which was being driven by Sennet Cryder, a salesman on July 29. Cryder was driving at a speed of 25 miles per hour west on the Florence-Chapel-pk., one-half mile west of the Red River bridge when a Dodge auto being driven by the defendants' fifteen-year-old son going at a rate of approximately 50 miles per hour, attempted to pass another car going the same way and in doing so crashed into the Reo, upsetting and completely wrecking it, the petition avers.

The defendants were negligent in letting a fifteen-year-old boy drive a car at this speed and Mrs. Martin, who was an occupant of the car at the time of the accident, was negligent in letting the minor son attempt to pass another auto when it was impossible, the suit asserts.

C. A. Leist and Barton Walters are attorneys for the Circleville Motors Co.

Marshall to appoint out-of-town judges to sit in on the case.

Chief Justice Marshall announced in handing down his decision the selection of Common Pleas Judges Walter D. Jones of Miami Co.; James Ogilvie of Carroll-co.; and William P. Vaughn of Morrow-co. to jointly hear the Bostwick case in common pleas court here beginning at 9 a. m. next Tuesday.

WRECK BASIS OF LAW SUIT

Circleville Motors Asks $1,000 For Damages in Wreck On July 29.

An automobile accident on the Florence Chapel Turnpike, near the Red River bridge July 29, is the outgrowth of a $1,000 money suit filed in common pleas court Friday. The Circleville Motors Co., has filed action for money against Thomas and Sarah Martin of Ashville.

The plaintiff was owner of a Reo automobile which was being driven by Sennet Cryder, a salesman on July 29. Cryder was driving at a speed of 25 miles per hour west on the Florence Chapel-pk, one-half mile west of the Red River bridge when a Dodge auto being driven by the defendants' fifteen-year-old son going at a rate of approximately 50 miles per hour, attempted to pass another car going the same way and in doing so crashed into the Reo, upsetting and completely wrecking it, the petition avers.

The defendants were negligent in letting a fifteen-year-old boy drive a car at this speed and Mrs. Martin, who was an occupant of the car at the time of the accident, was negligent in letting the minor son attempt to pass another auto when it was impossible, the suit asserts.

C. A. Leist and Barton Walters are attorneys for the Circleville Motors Co.

KING OUT OF OUSTER CASE

Judge Marshall Names Three 'Foreign' Judges to Hear Bostwick Case.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11.—The state supreme court today ruled that Judge John R. King disqualify himself from hearing the suspension proceedings against Probate Judge Homer Z. Bostwick.

Acting upon affidavits of prejudice filed by Bostwick's counsel, the court decided that Judge King had ruled himself out of hearing the case by signing a letter along with all other members of the common pleas court of Franklin-co asking Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall to appoint out-of-town judges to sit on the case.

Chief Justice Marshall announced in handing down his decision the selection of Common Pleas Judges Walter D. Jones of Miami Co., James Ogilvie of Carroll-co; and William P. Vaughn of Morrow-co to jointly hear the Bostwick case in common pleas court here beginning at 9 a. m. next Tuesday.

The impeachment case of Judge Bostwick follows complaints registered by 1,400 Columbus citizens in connection with his alleged act of using a public office for personal advantage.

PLANS ARE UNDERWAY FOR NATIONAL RADIO AUDITION

Who are the best young singers in Circleville? Opportunity is offered them to share in $25,000 in cash and to obtain scholarships in some great American conservatory of music or under a world renowned teacher through organization in Circleville for the Fifth National Radio Audition.

During the four years that this nation-wide competition to determine the best young men and young women singers in the United States has been conducted by the Atwater Kent Foundation of Philadelphia, more than 150,000 youthful songbirds have been given an opportunity to demonstrate their talents. This year a number greater than in any previous year is expected, and every village, town and city in the country is hastening its plans for local auditions. One young man and one young woman, between the ages of 18 and 25, will be selected by competition in each city or community. These will be entered in a state audition, from which the winning young man and young woman will go to represent their state in a district audition, of which there will be five. From each district, a young man and young woman will be selected to contest in the national finals to be held in New York in December. This competition will be broadcast from coast to coast. All winners of district

auditions will receive substantial rewards, determined in accordance with their rating in the national finals. These awards are:

Winners of first place (one boy and one girl), $5,000 each and two years' tuition in an American conservatory.

Winners of second place, $3,000 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of third place, $2,000 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of fourth place, $1,500 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of fifth place, $1,000 each and one year's tuition.

"I believe we are building for the future in searching out talented young singers for that great medium of culture and entertainment—Radio," said A. Atwater Kent, president of the Foundation bearing his name, in making the announcement today. "The discovery of one of those rare voices, of which each generation produces a few, seems to me an event of profound national importance. Even when such a voice could give pleasure to only a few thousand people it was a national treasure. Now that millions may enjoy it through the medium of radio, such a voice becomes priceless. So, just as a good voice is a divine gift, radio offers opportunity to share that gift with the greatest number."

"In previous auditions conducted by the Atwater Kent Foundation, our records show contestants have come back the second, third and even a fourth time, after losing out in a first attempt. This should be encouraging to all who have taken part in previous contests. The National Radio Audition is an undertaking to search the entire country for beautiful voices and to offer such singers full opportunity for development, recognition and reward. We hope each community in the country will receive the announcement of the Fifth National Audition in the spirit in which it is thus made and will present its candidates for state and national honors."

Wherever there are Lion's clubs, C. H. Lincoln is known. He has been a representative, International, for years. He is especially well known in Ohio, Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati.

The best route to the Barbee Chain is via Van Wert, Ohio, and Route 30 through Fort Wayne from Ohio will provide good roads.

The sun just going down to the westward in a field of glory. A golden reflection across Little Barbee or Irish Lake. Blue-black waters. Shadow patches from the lily beds and flags, or from trees across the surface of the water. A tang of fall in the air. A flock of woodchucks winnowing their way to their swamps for the night. You cast your plug or wobbler into a nook among the lilies. You try again. Farther down you see minnows skipping and maybe you see a swirl. Cast there. You make the cast just as you start to reel in there is a splash and a tug. The fight's on. Big bass hit with the last gleaming rays of the setting sun. They're feeding then. One of the most beautiful sunsets the writer has ever seen at any of the Lake States fishing resorts was a Barbee. These lakes—little gems on the bosom of Nature; pretty, restful, and easy to reach. never use a light. The water is so clear that a light frightens them away. Only a small flashlight should be used in searching for bait or in unhooking and stringing a fish. The best baits or lures for bass in these lakes are: the Binn's Bait, bass size, made in Columbus; the Plueger "Pat-O-Mine" or any of the red-head plugs. The "Bass-orens" are killers here. You will take mostly large-mouth and when they are biting almost any lure or plug will attract them. The writer likes the Binn's Bait because of its peculiar wobble that seems to make 'em strike.

After leaving Route 30 at the "Barbee Lakes Sign" 38 miles west of Fort Wayne or about 15 miles west and north from Columbus City, you arrive at the New Barbee hotel where C. H. Lincoln is a gracious host. Seven connecting lakes beckon. Big Barbee, Little Barbee, Lush Lake, Sawmill, Seacrest, Banning, and Dan Kuhn Lake. Within a radius of 10 miles are 55 lakes. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln make things enjoyable for their fishermen guests. The new Barbee hotel has good beds, nice rooms, a cozy lobby, and beautiful surroundings, all of which enhance the pleasures of a fishing trip to the Barbee Chain. Cottages are also available. The Barbee Chain is just four miles off the main road from the sign.

September is a good bass time. Blues are biting now. Croppies are quite plentiful. Bluegills that weigh a pound are frequently taken. In October there is a good duck shooting at these lakes. A letter to C. H. Lincoln would bring all the necessary information.

Now here is a beautiful chain of lakes, so close to home for Ohio fishermen that they are being overlooked. If you don't want to go to Canada or some far-away place to the Barbee Chain with all the atmosphere of sister lakes of Michigan just across the line to the north, will not disappoint the bass or bluegill fisherman. The writer recommends the Barbee Chain. He has been there. When he finds something good he likes to pass it on to other fishermen readers. He wants to go back. That's recommendation enough.

greater than in any previous year is expected, and every village, town and city in the country is hastening its plans for local auditions. One young man and one young woman, between the ages of 18 and 25, will be selected by competition in each city or community. These will be entered in a state audition, from which the winning young man and young woman will go to represent their state in a district audition, of which there will be five. From each district, a young man and young woman will be selected to contest in the national finals to be held in New York in December. This competition will be broadcast from coast to coast. All winners of district

auditions will receive substantial rewards, determined in accordance with their rating in the national finals. These awards are:

Winners of first place (one boy and one girl), $5,000 each and two years' tuition in an American conservatory.

Winners of second place, $3,000 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of third place, $2,000 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of fourth place, $1,500 each and one year's tuition.

Winners of fifth place, $1,000 each and one year's tuition.

"I believe we are building for the future in searching out talented young singers for that great medium of culture and entertainment—Radio," said A. Atwater Kent, president of the Foundation bearing his name, in making the announcement today. "The discovery of one of those rare voices, of which each generation produces a few, seems to me an event of profound national importance. Even when such a voice could give pleasure to only a few thousand people it was a national treasure. Now that millions may enjoy it through the medium of radio, such a voice becomes priceless. So, just as a good voice is a divine gift, radio offers opportunity to share that gift with the greatest number."

"In previous auditions conducted by the Atwater Kent Foundation, our records show contestants have come back the second, third and even a fourth time, after losing out in a first attempt. This should be encouraging to all who have taken part in previous contests. The National Radio Audition is an undertaking to search the entire country for beautiful voices and to offer such singers full opportunity for development, recognition and reward. We hope each community in the country will receive the announcement of the Fifth National Audition in the spirit in which it is thus made and will present its candidates for state and national honors."

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 10.—Barbee Lakes, just off the main highway route 30, between Columbia City, Indiana and Warsaw, near Warsaw. Here is a beautiful chain of lakes, with limpid blue waters, great beds of lilies and mosses, hidden bars, pockets and pools, where big bass lurk and good sized pike lie in wait for your lure. These lakes are teeming with bluegills—big blues that come up—all cupped up—you know how, if you are a bluegill fisherman. There is no better place to go for catfish in northern Indiana. After a day with the bass and bluegills, one can enjoy the evening or night fishing for catfish.

Catfishermen at Barbee Lakes never use a light. The water is so clear that a light frightens them away. Only a small flashlight should be used in searching for bait or in unhooking and stringing a fish. The best baits or lures for bass in these lakes are: the Binn's Bait, bass size, made in Columbus; the Plueger "Pal-O-Mine" or any of the red-head plugs. The "Bass-orenos" are killers here. You will take mostly large-mouth and when they are biting almost any lure or plug will attract them. The writer likes the Binn's Bait because of its peculiar wobble that seems to make 'em strike.

After leaving Route 30 at the "Barbee Lakes Sign" 38 miles west of Fort Wayne or about 15 miles west and north from Columbia City, you arrive at the New Barbee hotel where C. H. Lincoln is a gracious host. Seven connecting lakes beckon. Big Barbee, Little Barbee, Irish Lake, Sawmill, Seacrest, Banning, and Dan Kuhn Lake. Within a radius of 10 miles are 55 lakes. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln make things enjoyable for their fishermen guests. The new Barbee hotel has good beds, nice rooms, a cozy lobby, and beautiful surroundings, all of which enhance the pleasures of a fishing trip to the Barbee Chain. Cottages are also available. The Barbee Chain is just four miles off the main road from the sign.

September is a good bass time. Blues are biting now. Croppies are quite plentiful. Bluegills that weigh a pound are frequently taken. In October there is a good duck shooting at these lakes. A letter to C. H. Lincoln would bring all the necessary information.

Now here is a beautiful chain of lakes, so close to home for Ohio fishermen that they are being overlooked. If you don't want to go to Canada or some far-away place to the Barbee Chain with all the atmosphere of sister lakes of Michigan just across the line to the north, will not disappoint the bass or bluegill fisherman. The writer recommends the Barbee Chain. He has been there. When he finds something good he likes to pass it on to other fishermen readers. He wants to go back. That's recommendation enough.

Wherever there are Lion's clubs, C. H. Lincoln is known. He has been a representative, International, for years. He is especially well known in Ohio, Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati.

The best route to the Barbee Chain is via Van Wert, Ohio, and Route 30 through Fort Wayne from Ohio will provide good roads. The sun just going down to the westward in a field of glory. A golden reflection across Little Barbee or Irish Lake. Blue-black waters. Shadow patches from the lily beds and flags, or from trees along the shore. Just a ripple across the surface of the water. A tang of fall in the air. A flock of woodchucks winnowing their way to their swamps for the night. You cast your plug or wobbler into a nook among the lilies. You try again. Farther down you see minnows skipping and maybe you see a swirl. Cast there. You make the cast just as you start to reel in there is a splash and a tug. The fight's on. Big bass hit with the last gleaming rays of the setting sun. They're feeding then. One of the most beautiful sunsets the writer has ever seen at any of the Lake States fishing resorts was a Barbee. These lakes—little gems, on the bosom of Nature; pretty, restful, and easy to reach. Kosciusko-co, Indiana's county of Lakes and fishing waters.

The thought of French cuisine suggests an atmosphere of fine cooking, but to most persons it means also elaborate dishes which only a chef can achieve. However, there are many simple, nourishing, and inexpensive French dishes which any housewife can prepare, points out the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its weekly discussion of low-cost foods.
The dishes of the homely French kitchen and the small establishment are especially suitable for American families who budget their food. Economy and thrift are not new to French housewives, who justly pride themselves on their ability to utilize every bit of edible food in one appetizing dish or another.
An illustration of this is their pot-au-feu, which means "pot on the fire," and which might be called the national dish of the country. On the stove of every French kitchen is a special pot in to which all sorts of leftovers go. Scraps of meat, bones, necks, giblets and other parts of fowl, carefully selected vegetable waters, and bits of vegetables like the outside stalks of celery, find their way into the pot-au-feu. This soup is never watery and always has a good meat foundation, as the recipe in today's Market Basket shows. It frequently serves as the entire meal for a French peasant family.
Following the French custom, the clear broth may be served alone at the beginning of the dinner. A savory tomato sauce usually accompanies the meats, after which the vegetables are served, also alone. Because the soup is simmered, the shin meat, for which the recipe calls, is sweet flavored and very tender.
Follow the directions for cooking carefully advises the bureau, or the meat will be tough, the broth evaporated, and the vegetables mushy.
Another soup that is typically French is onion soup, a dish which, it is said, made an ancient king of Poland forget his lost crown. Some Americans may not share his enthusiasm, but it is a prime favorite with those who are fond of onions. The recipe is quite simple, and the ingredients are comparatively inexpensive, with the exception of the Gruyere cheese. Another cheese may be used instead.
The general method for making this soup is to brown the thinly-sliced onions in butter, add boiling water, salt, and pepper, and simmer for about half an hour. The cook may use soup stock instead of water. Put toasted bread in the bottom of an earthenware baking dish, pour the soup over it, and sprinkle cheese generously on top.

Add another layer of toast and grated cheese and heat the dish in the oven until the top is brown and crusty. Serve the soup at the table directly from the earthenware dish.
The sauces which the French use a great deal are not so intricate as they first seem to alien cooks who are unused to their names and ingredients. Besides putting a finishing touch to many delicious dishes, French sauces frequently are a means of serving inexpensive foods in an attractive and savory fashion.
Numerous piquant herbs such as shallots, chives, garlic leeks, rosemary, thyme, sweet basil cloves, paprika, pepper corn, and celery supplement the usual seasonings of salt and pepper. Bouillon or stock—a little weaker than would be served at the table—is the basis of these sauces. Each one has special dishes to which it is best suited. Sauces known as pepper, Robert, and piquante, for instance, are spicy and therefore most appropriate for pork or dishes which are making their second appearance at the table.
Unlike the American custom, eggs are not served for breakfast in France. The French eat them in various forms for lunch and use them extensively for garnish and sometimes as a dessert in a fruit omelette. But this does not mean that omelettes are never the main dish of a meal. They are, in the modest home as well as in the large hotels. In addition to the cheese omelette, for which the present Market Basket gives the recipe, vegetables, meats, and fish also are used.
The French cook beef and pork in much the same manner as we do. They pay particular attention to serving in special dishes the inexpensive cuts of meat and the many edible portions such as liver, kidneys, brains, and sweetbreads. Calves' ears, tripe, and pigs' feet are always utilized—so well, in fact, that one Parisian restaurant has built an international reputation on its tripe dishes.
Of their vegetable dishes, the French fried potato is best known to us. The others are familiar friends served in a slightly different fashion with sauces and special seasonings. In the popular one known as macedoine of vegetables several different vegetables are cut up fine and cooked together.
French desserts are not nearly so varied as American desserts. Pastries, fruit, either fresh or in compote (a variation of stewed fruit), cheese, and crepes Suzette, a sort of pancake, are the usual desserts. Pain perdu, for which a recipe is given below, is an especially good example of their thrifty way of serving a leftover in tasty form—in this case stale bread.
The typical French breakfast consists of coffee with milk, or chocolate, rolls, and sweet butter. Most Americans do not consider this sufficient, so the bureau supplements it in this week's menu with cooked cereal and milk.

History Day An Annual Event Here Since 1912

Editor's note: following is an article written by Mrs. Howard Jones which will be followed by others leading up to the annual History Day celebration at Logan Elm Park, Oct. 4.

In 1912 a few interested persons bought a small tract of land bordering on Congo creek, Pickaway-co, in which the old Elm tree known for generations as "Logan Elm," is situated.

The property was deeded to the State of Ohio to be used as a State park and dedicated to the memory of Logan, the Mingo Chief, who near this tree, delivered his immortal speech, "I appeal to any white man to know if ever he came to Logan's cabin hungry and he gave him no meat," etc. Thomas Jefferson, then president of the United States, declared this utterance to be the equal in eloquence to any speech known to man, not excepting Demosthenes or Cicero.

The Park was named "Logan Elm Park" and consisted of a little over four acres of land—containing the tree. Mr. James Boggs, the owner of the farm surrounding the tree took great pride in and cared for the majestic tree which experts say must have stood there when Columbus landed on these shores. In his will, Capt. Boggs committed the tree to his heirs to be cared for perpetually.

Since 1912—nineteen years ago—meetings have been held once each year, at which men of note have addressed interested audiences.

In 1926 these audiences had assumed such proportions, and interest in the pioneer history of the State had grown to such an extent that it was deemed wise to incorporate and elect a board of directors.

This was done; the new organization named "The Ohio History Day Association" with the object to interest the people of Ohio in their pioneer history, especially in relation to the North American Indian, and to foster a love of truth, patriotism and progression.

Officers elected were: Mrs. Howard Jones, president; John F. Carlisle, vice president, Columbus; Agnes Butch, secretary; Mrs. G. G. Leist, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Schoedinger, Columbus; George F. Bareis, Canal Winchester; C. B. Galbreath, Columbus; Harry Stevenson; Gen. George Florence, Columbus; Miss E. J. Ruggles, Pasadena, Cal.; Dr. Howard Jones; John Wilson; Prof. M. S. Cox; C. C. Chappelle; and J. W. Johnson.

The Park is widely known and visited by many people—sometimes several hundred in one day, and at the annual meeting which occurs on the first Sunday of October, thousands gather to enjoy the fine programs prepared for them.

Reverence and Patriotism mark the whole procedure. Many come from a distance—bring their lunch and spend the day in the great outdoors with their family and friends.

During the exercises which begin about two o'clock and last about an hour and a half the audience is quiet and attentive. The road to the Park—a short connecting road between the Kingston-Rock and State Route 23 (Chillicothe-pk), is under care of the State Highway officials. A competent man in charge of parking, there is no confusion. Every thing possible has been done to ensure the maximum of comfort and entertainment of those who attend these meetings.

The Park conforms to all the State regulations and is on the accredited list.

The thought of French cuisine suggests an atmosphere of fine cooking, but to most persons it means also elaborate dishes which only a chef can achieve. However, there are many simple, nourishing, and inexpensive French dishes which any housewife can prepare, points out the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its weekly discussion of low-cost foods.

The dishes of the homely French kitchen and the small establishment are especially suitable for American families who budget their food. Economy and thrift are not new to French housewives, who justly pride themselves on their ability to utilize every bit of edible food in one appetizing dish or another.

An illustration of this is their pot-au-feu, which means "pot on the fire," and which might be called the national dish of the country. On the stove of every French kitchen is a special pot in which all sorts of leftovers go. Scraps of meat, bones, necks, giblets, and other parts of fowl, carefully selected vegetable waters, and bits of vegetables like the outside stalks of celery, find their way into the pot-au-feu. This soup is never watery and always has a good meat foundation, as the recipe in today's Market Basket shows. It frequently serves as the entire meal for a French peasant family.

Following the French custom, the clear broth may be served alone at the beginning of the dinner. A savory tomato sauce usually accompanies the meats, after which the vegetables are served, also alone. Because the soup is simmered, the shin meat, for which the recipe calls, is sweet flavored and very tender.

Following the directions for cooking carefully advises the bureau, or the meat will be tough, the broth evaporated, and the vegetables mushy.

Another soup that is typically French is onion soup, a dish which, it is said, made an ancient king of Potage forget his lost crown. Some Americans may not share his enthusiasm, but it is a prime favorite with those who are fond of onions. The recipe is quite simple, and the ingredients are comparatively inexpensive, with the exception of the Gruyere cheese. Another cheese may be used instead.

The general method for making this soup is to brown the thinly-sliced onions in butter, add boiling water, salt, and pepper, and simmer for about half an hour. The cook may use soup stock instead of water. Put toasted bread in the bottom of an earthenware baking dish, pour the soup over it, and sprinkle cheese generously on top.

Add another layer of toast and grated cheese and heat the dish in the oven until the top is brown and crusty. Serve the soup at the table directly from the earthenware dish.

The sauces which the French use a great deal are not so intricate as they first seem to alien cooks who are unused to their names and ingredients. Besides putting a finishing touch to many delicious dishes, French sauces frequently are a means of serving inexpensive foods in an attractive and savory fashion.

Numerous piquant herbs such as shallots, chives, garlic leeks, rosemary, thyme, sweet basil cloves, paprika, pepper corn, and celery supplement the usual seasonings of salt and pepper. Bouillon or stock—a little weaker than would be served at the table—is the basis of these sauces. Each one has special dishes to which it is best suited. Sauces known as pepper, Robert, and piquante, for instance, are spicy and therefore most appropriate for pork or dishes which are making their second appearance at the table.

Unlike the American custom, eggs are not served for breakfast in France. The French eat them in various forms for lunch and use them extensively for garnish and sometimes as a dessert in a fruit omelette. But this does not mean that omelettes are never the main dish of a meal. They are, in the modest home as well as in the large hotels. In addition to the cheese omelette, for which the present Market Basket gives the recipe, vegetables, meats, and fish also are used.

The French cook beef and pork in much the same manner as we do. They pay particular attention to serving in special dishes the inexpensive cuts of meat and the many edible portions such as liver, kidneys, brains, and sweetbreads. Calves' ears, tripe, and pigs' feet are always utilized—so well, in fact, that one Parisian restaurant has built an international reputation on its tripe dishes.

Of their vegetable dishes, the French fried potato is best known to us. The others are familiar friends served in a slightly different fashion with sauces and special seasonings. In the popular one known as macedoine of vegetables several different vegetables are cut up fine and cooked together.

French desserts are not nearly so varied as American desserts. Pastries, fruit, either fresh or in compote (a variation of stewed fruit), cheese, and crepes Suzette, a sort of pancake, are the usual desserts. Pain perdu, for which a recipe is given below, is an especially good example of their thrifty way of serving a leftover in tasty form—in this case stale bread.

The typical French breakfast consists of coffee with milk, or chocolate, rolls, and sweet butter. Most Americans do not consider this sufficient, so the bureau supplements it in this week's menu with cooked cereal and milk.

FAR REACHING HANDS

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER IX.
LATER she asked Mary Lou to come back to Westwood.
"Your room is waiting for you; it looks lovely," she said, "and all your things are there."
"But," said Mary Lou, "my job is over." She tried very hard to smile but the red mouth quivered.
"Come as my guest," said Margaret briskly.
"Please," said Mary Lou, "not yet. I suppose sometime I can—and we can laugh about it all. But not yet."
Margaret did not urge her further. She had plans of her own and consulted secretly with Jenny about them. The upshot was that several days later Jenny invited Mary Lou to come "gadding" with her.

"I've some shopping to do," she announced, "and you can go to your darned old school and tell 'em why you've been absent."
"I'll tell them I'll come back Monday," said Mary Lou with spirit.
"If you like, and I can't persuade you to stay," remarked Jenny carelessly. "Then, as it's the grandest day I've ever seen, let's run out to Long Island, and perhaps we can meet in at Oakdale and Larry can look us in at town for dinner. How's that for a program?"

"It was a very marvelous day. Mary Lou looked out of the window. Spring was dancing down summer on feet shod with the soft green of her season, her arms full of early roses. The sun was high and brilliant, and it was warm, but warmth with a vitality in it. Spring, thought Mary Lou, is a hard season, really, and a cruel one.
They started out for town and early in the afternoon were riding together, Jenny at her roadster's wheel, on the Long Island roads.
"Do, you plan to live at the hotel?" asked Jenny.
"Not permanently. It's too expensive. I want to get a furnished room somewhere," replied Mary Lou, and shuddered a little. A furnished room sounded so dismal.
"What will you do with your car—and a Konig?" Jenny went on.
"Are you crazy?" Mary Lou stared at her blankly.
"Aunt Margaret told me she'd given you the car. And, of course, Travers gave you the dog. And where will you keep that horse of yours? Not, I trust, in a furnished room, though some might seem suitable."
"But," said Mary Lou, "I couldn't take them anyhow; they don't really belong to me."
"Is that so? Well, I don't know how the car feels or the horse either, but they tell me Konig is a shadow of himself with missing you. You can't just accept things, accustom them to you, and then drop 'em again," said Jenny austere.

She turned off into another road and while Mary Lou was still pondering her last remark, stopped.
"Here we are," she said. "I heard there's going to be a stunt flying today."
The Saturday crowds filled the flying field. Mary Lou got out of the car, a little bewildered. Jenny walked her briskly across the field, her keen eyes searching, as she walked, and her gay tongue rattling on carelessly. Suddenly:
"There's Travers!" she cried, and waved.

The Reunion
Travers was standing by a plane, his new plane, and talking with the mechanic. He had arrived down at her very tall, very good-looking. "I'm ready to take you up for that flight," he said.
"Not me," Jenny said hastily. "I'm not keen on bird life. There's Larry," she cried and ran off to meet her fellow conspirator.
Lorrimer and Mary Lou stood together, in the middle of that crowded noisy field. Planes were above them, planes were coming down to rest further away, and near them stood Lorrimer's great bird, static, waiting.
"Will you come with me?" He smiled whimsically. "In the old days I suppose one would say 'Will you fly with me?' Mary Lou—daring Mary Lou!"
She whispered, "Lorry!"
"Why did you run away?" he asked her.
She didn't answer in words, but she raised her eyes to his own. He said swiftly:
"I know, I understand. It's you I love, Mary Lou. Everything is clear sailing before us. Will you marry me, darling?" said Lorrimer.
Mary Lou looked at him a full minute. Then:
"Are you sure?" she asked slowly.

"Yes, I'm sure. I have always been sure of myself, I think, but never of you. There were times when I thought—when I believed—but, then, when I learned the truth I wondered how much was you, how much the part you played. Can you tell me now?" he asked, not touching her, his hands deep in the pockets of his flying suit, his eyes intense and waiting.
"Yes, I'll tell," Mary Lou answered bravely, "but it will take me all the rest of my life."
He caught her in his arms, then kissed her wildly, careless of any who might see. But people were used to meetings and partings on the flying field. He cried out:
"Tell me then, begin now. You promised, once!"
"I love you, Lorry," said Mary Lou.
"And you'll trust yourself to me, always?"
"Yes."

Tomorrow's Plans
It was a very marvelous day. Mary Lou looked out of the window. Spring was dancing down summer on feet shod with the soft green of her season, her arms full of early roses. The sun was high and brilliant, and it was warm, but warmth with a vitality in it. Spring, thought Mary Lou, is a hard season, really, and a cruel one.
They started out for town and early in the afternoon were riding together, Jenny at her roadster's wheel, on the Long Island roads.
"Do, you plan to live at the hotel?" asked Jenny.
"Not permanently. It's too expensive. I want to get a furnished room somewhere," replied Mary Lou, and shuddered a little. A furnished room sounded so dismal.
"What will you do with your car—and a Konig?" Jenny went on.
"Are you crazy?" Mary Lou stared at her blankly.
"Aunt Margaret told me she'd given you the car. And, of course, Travers gave you the dog. And where will you keep that horse of yours? Not, I trust, in a furnished room, though some might seem suitable."
"But," said Mary Lou, "I couldn't take them anyhow; they don't really belong to me."
"Is that so? Well, I don't know in war or economic stress, and it can be fatal to prosperity for all elements to pull against each other in a time of peace and plenty. Cooperation and mutual understanding are a preventive as well as a cure.

Cooperation, sympathy and understanding will help restore the world to economic, political and social normalcy, but why abandon them as soon as normal conditions return? Isn't that inviting another catastrophe?

Going Home
"No more make-believe?"
"So little of it was," she said. "No, no more."
He whistled to the watching but tactful mechanic.
He lifted Mary Lou into the plane and settled her comfortably. He said:
"Larry and Jenny, bless them, can shift for themselves. We are going home. The landing field is ready at Westwood. Westwood ho!" said Lorrimer, laughing. "We have to get there in a hurry, because we're invited to a wedding. Doc Dan's best man, Larry, the only usher, Mother will give you away, and I hope no one does the same for me. Jenny's your bridesmaid—we'll get the license tomorrow."
"Wait a minute. Suppose Jenny hadn't brought me to you today?" she asked.
"I would have found you tomorrow. Must I confess that I wired a detective agency from Wynnes' camp? Kiss me, Mary Lou, and let's go home!"
The propeller whirled; there was a beating of wings. Contact! Lorrimer leaned to kiss her again. His hand was on the stick and the mechanic ran back on the field. Larry and Jenny, not far off, looked up and watched, smiling. The great bird rose on its spread wings and soared off into the thin blue, climbing, climbing.
Jenny and Larry watched it out of sight, turned to each other, laughed with a triumph of fellow conspirators, and walked to the waiting car.
"They're gone," said Jenny, straining her eyes.
"They're headed home," Larry told her.
(The End.)

Common Purpose
COMMON human difficulties in a time of world depression tend to bring people to a better understanding and closer cooperation. All classes and groups in a country and all nations work together for their common good when they make war against a common enemy.
Rulers have often made selfish use of this principle by finding a common enemy for their people when they become rebellious and lawless. Internal strife is forgotten in the heat and emotion of a quarrel with some foreign power.
Ambassador Dawes recently observed that when common prosperity exists among the peoples a common cause of it is not always perceived by the masses, but they sense the cause of common suffering.

AT TE CLIFTONA
Long-famed as the perfect hero of the notable play, "Alibi" Regis Toomey, now a popular Paramount featured player, has an opportunity to act another role similar to the one that brought him his greatest fame. He is cast opposite Clara Bow in the red-headed "It" girl's first talking dramatic picture, "Kick In."
"Kick In," which will show here Saturday at the Cliftona theater Friday, was adapted for the screen by Bartlett Cormack, author of the stage hit, "The Racket." It is the talking screen version of the justly famous Willard Mack stage play. The story is a distinct departure in Clara Bow vehicles, being strong, red-blooded drama, absolutely divorced from the light comedy and farce elements which have featured the Bow stories of the past.
Tommy, as the bounded convict, madly in love with "his girl," Clara Bow, fighting the tenacious minions of the law, fighting the urging of his underworld pal, fighting the temptations of "the racket," is a great character. Opposite Miss Bow he gives a thrillingly convincing portrait of the criminal trying to reform. A burning love story is woven into the intense action.
AT THE GRAND
The touch of the gypsy that seems to be in the most of us, finds an answering echo to the story brought to the screen by Warner Brothers in "Children of Dreams," the Rosenberg-Hammerstein romance dealing with the wandering fruit harvesters of California and their care-free life.
Most people are too closely bound by convention to live as these people do or to enjoy their simple pleasures, but adventure to the wanderlust is an almost universal possession.

"Children of Dreams," the featured production now showing at the Grand Theater, is consequently a picture for everyone who dreams day dreams or longs at times for a chance to get away from the hold of the actual.
Included in the cast are Margaret Schilling, Paul Gregory, Tom Patriola, Bruce Winston, Charles Wunninger and Marion Byron. Alan Crosland directed.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE by ANTHONY ABBOT

CHAPTER I.
The disappearance of Geraldine Foster was first reported to the authorities on the third day after Christmas, several years ago.
Only a desk-lamp was burning in the famous private office at the north end of the second floor of Police Headquarters at 240 Centre Street, New York City. The rest of the Commissioner's room was darkened with the premature shadows of a raw and gusty winter afternoon. Brooding over a shuffle of blue-prints, Thatcher Colt sat at his desk, enchanted with the traffic puzzle of a great city.
Finally he glanced up at me quizzically.
"You can go, Tony," he said. "You've done enough work for one secretary today."
"Captain Henry wants to see you, but I think you didn't wish to be disturbed," I replied.
"Oh, well—send him right in."
Captain Henry was in charge of the cluster of offices surrounding the private room of the Police Commissioner of New York City. In this capacity he was the guardian of Thatcher Colt's privacy and all visitors had to see him first.
Responding to my call, Henry marched into the office, a heavy-set, silver-haired police captain, and, saluting, laid an opened envelope before Thatcher Colt.
"Young lady brought this in. Been waiting an hour. Says she won't go away until you've looked at it yourself."
Thatcher Colt read the letter with deep attention. Under the lamp-light the Commissioner was a striking figure, with his huge and powerful frame and soldier's face. He was the best dressed man in public life, and regarded by the news-frivolous newspapers as a lanceur or, at best, a dilettante in crime, yet not since the days of Theodore Roosevelt had the Department known a chief of such strength, courage and decision. His black hair was crisp and closely cut, his brown eyes sombre and resolute, and his firm features averted action and authority.

his command were all athletes. Addressing Betty Canfield, Thatcher Colt explained:
"Captain Laird is the chief of our Missing Persons Bureau. More than three thousand disappearance cases are reported to his office every year and he manages to account for an average of 98 percent of them—so you've come to the right place."
Half Truths.
Betty Canfield's glance toward Captain Laird was full of appeal.
"However, our most difficult cases," admonished Thatcher Colt, "are those in which the family or friends give only a part of the truth, and not all. So tell us everything."
With admirable directness, Betty Canfield related a curious story. For three years she had been sharing a small apartment on Morning-side Heights with Geraldine Foster, a girl of about her own age, who worked in a doctor's office in Washington Square. Recently the two girls had agreed to separate, because Geraldine was planning to be married, the date and I asked her what was the matter. She admitted that she and Doctor Maskell had quarreled. But she wouldn't tell me why.

"Doctor Maskell," reflected Colt aloud, "he's related to George Maskell, the criminal lawyer?"
"I understand they are brothers," said Betty.
"A very distinguished family," interposed Captain Laird. "And a queer one. George Maskell is the Robin Hood of the radicals—he and his wife, who is his law partner, represent rich clients at enormous fees and then work for radicals for nothing. They were also associated with Clarence Darrow and Arthur Garfield Hays, in the Grecco-Carillo murder case."
"I remember," nodded Colt. "Doctor Maskell must be a rich man."
"Geraldine told me he will be rich when his father dies," explained Betty Canfield. "The two sons will inherit millions then. But neither of them has much now, I understand."
"About what time was it when

"So you are the niece of Frank Canfield," he began.
having been set for January 2. The last time the two had been together was around noon on the previous Saturday, which was Christmas Eve, when they lunched at the Hotel Brevoort and then looked at a one-room apartment in 240 Centre Street which Betty had decided to lease.
"I said good-bye to Geraldine at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. Suddenly she leaned forward and kissed me and she said, 'If I don't come home for supper, Betty, don't be worried—I'll be doing my Christmas shopping.' And before I could answer she had crossed the Avenue and was walking down toward Washington Square."
"And you haven't heard from her since," asked Thatcher Colt, frowning.
"I talked with her later that afternoon over the telephone and, Mr. Colt, it was that last conversation which makes me feel so frightened."
"Why, how is that?"
"I called Geraldine to tell her about a Christmas bonus that our firm had given to the employees. I waited for an hour, because Geraldine had said the doctor would be like a fool and wouldn't be at that time. I could tell by her voice that she had been crying."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE INCREASE IS GREATER THAN POPULATION'S

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—School attendance in the United States increased between 1920 and 1930 at a rate greater than the gain in population according to figures issued today by the Bureau of census. In the former year 64.3 percent of those between 5 and 20 years having been at their classes as compared with 69.9 per cent in the latter.

Out of the total population of 38,877,032 in the 5-20 age group last year 26,849,639 were attending school sometime since September 1, 1929, census figures taken April 1 of the following year revealed. This was an increase of about 5,500,000 from the preceding census.

Figures showed that 13,521,768 of the male population between these ages, or 70.2 per cent were in school in the 1929-1930 period, an increase of nearly 3,000,000 from 1920, while 13,327,871 girls or 69.7 of the total between the 5-20 year mark were given as students.

Virtually all physically and mentally fit young children were in schools at the last census the figures indicate. A total of 95.3 per cent of the 17,209,566 children between 7 and 13 years were returned as in schools. This was a material improvement from the 1920 census which showed but 90.6 per cent of the 15,306,793 of that age as students.

Figures revealed that 20 per cent of the 2,505,250 children of five years were in schools in the 1929-1930 period as compared with 18.8 per cent in 1920; 6 years old, 66.3 percent of the 2,515,285 children, compared with 63.3 percent; 14 and 15 years, 88.8 per cent of the 4,678,044 as compared with 79.9 per cent; 16 to 17 years, 57.3 per cent of the 4,663,137 compared with 79.9 percent; 18 to 20 years, 21.4 per cent of the 6,815,710 as compared with 14.8 percent in 1920 while there were 1,034,782 persons 21 years and over attending schools in 1930 compared with 344,789 in 1920.

In the age group from 7 to 13 years in the north the percentage attending school was 97.7; in the south, 90.8 and in the west 96.0; for those of 14 and 15 years the percentage was 92 in the north, 82.2 in the south and 94.6 in the west; the 16 and 17 years group showed school attendance of 57.6 per cent in the north, 52.3 per cent in the south and 75.1 percent in the west while for the 18 to 20 years group the percentages were 21 in the north, 19.5 in the south and 31.3 in the west.

There was 98.4 per cent of those from 7 to 13 years attending schools in Nebraska, that state having established the high record while the lowest percentage was 86.4 per cent for South Carolina. California was high with 97.2 per cent for the 14-15 years group and Georgia low with 73.7 percent; for the 16-17 years group California was high with 82.1 per cent and Rhode Island low with 40.4 percent; for the 18 to 20 years group, Washington ranked second with 33.6 percent with Georgia low at 14.3 per cent.

Percentages were not given for the over 21 group. New York was first with 117,066 students and California second with 103,461, while Nevada stood at the bottom with 622.

Of the white population 96.6 per cent of those from 7 to 13 years were returned as in school; 90.4 percent of the 14-15 years group; 58.9 percent of the 16-17 years group and 23 per cent of the 18 to 20 years group. For the negro race 87.3 percent of the 7-13 years group was in schools; 78.1 per cent of 14-15 years; 46.3 percent of 16-17 years and 13.3 percent of 18-20 years. For other races the percentages were somewhat lower than for negroes.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE INCREASE IS GREATER THAN POPULATION'S

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—School attendance in the United States increased between 1920 and 1930 at a rate greater than the gain in population according to figures issued today by the Bureau of census. In the former year 64.3 percent of those between 5 and 20 years having been at their classes as compared with 69.9 per cent in the latter.

Out of the total population of 38,387,032 in the 5-20 age group last year 26,849,639 were attending school sometime since September 1, 1929, census figures taken April 1 of the following year revealed. This was an increase of about 5,500,000 from the preceding census.

Figures showed that 13,521,768 of the male population between these ages, or 70.2 per cent were in school in the 1929-1930 period, an increase of nearly 3,000,000 from 1920, while 13,327,871 girls or 69.7 of the total between the 5-20 year mark were given as students.

Virtually all physically and mentally fit young children were in schools at the last census the figures indicate. A total of 95.3 per cent of the 17,209,566 children between 7 and 13 years were returned as in schools. This was a material improvement from the 1920 census which showed but 90.6 per cent of the 15,306,793 of that age as students.

Figures revealed that 20 per cent of the 2,505,250 children of five years were in schools in the 1929-1930 period as compared with 18.8 per cent in 1920; 6 years old, 66.3 percent of the 2,515,285 children, compared with 63.3 percent; 14 and 15 years, 88.8 per cent of the 4,678,04 as compared with 79.9 per cent; 16 to 17 years, 57.3 per cent of the 4,663,137 compared with 79.9 percent; 18 to 20 years, 21.4 per cent of the 6,815,710 as compared with 14.8 percent in 1920 while there were 1,034,782 persons 21 years and over attending schools in 1930 compared with 344,789 in 1920.

In the age group from 7 to 13 years in the north the percentage attending school was 97.7; in the south, 90.8 and in the west 96.0; for those of 14 and 15 years the percentage was 92 in the north, 82.2 in the south and 94.6 in the west; the 16 and 17 years group showed school attendance of 57.6 per cent in the north, 52.3 per cent in the south and 75.1 percent in the west while for the 18 to 20 years group the percentages were 21 in the north, 19.5 in the south and 31.3 in the west.

There was 98.4 per cent of those from 7 to 13 years attending schools in Nebraska, that state having established the high record while the lowest percentage was 86.4 per cent for South Carolina. California was high with 97.2 per cent for the 14-15 years group and Georgia low with 73.7 percent; for the 16-17 years group California was high with 82.1 per cent and Rhode Island low with 40.4 per cent; for the 18 to 20 years group, Washington ranked second with 33.6 percent with Georgia low at 14.3 per cent.

Percentages were not given for the over 21 group. New York was first with 117,066 students and California second with 103,461, while Nevada stood at the bottom with 622.

Of the white population 96.6 per cent of those from 7 to 13 years were returned as in school; 90.4 percent of the 14-15 years group; 58.9 percent of the 16-17 years group and 23 per cent of the 18 to 20 years group. For the negro race 87.3 percent of the 7-13 years group was in schools; 78.1 per cent of 14-15 years; 46.3 percent of 16-17 years and 13.3 percent of 18-20 years. For other races the percentages were somewhat lower than for negroes.

Spartans Ready For Eastern 11

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 11.—Both squads boasting "mid-season" legs after a fortnight's strenuous training, Portsmouth's Spartans and Brooklyn's Dodgers are ready officially to kick the lid off National Pro League football here Sunday afternoon in what promises to be the keenest fought season opener in League history.

Coaches in football's graduate class find few if any soft spots comparable to some of the "test Saturdays" which college mentors often write into their fall schedule. Every game has a meaning all its own when League standings are concerned—a meaning which baseball managers, for instance, can laugh off easily enough sometimes when the boys are in a slump but one in which the pro football club bosses read the writing on the wall.

With short seasons of eleven weeks and schedules of fifteen to eighteen games there can be no slumps.

In his determination to show his mates how to "take the lead and hold it" Spartan Coach, Geo. "Potsy" Clark trotted out twenty-two huskies with headgears early this week for a home-made game which went the full route. Potsy's 'first' team pushed over four touchdowns with some hard running and mixed in two more via the aerial route. John C. Depler, another Zuppke trained product who coached Columbia's line for ten years before accepting his post as head coach of Brooklyn's Dodgers also served notice with a report of a 65 to 0 win by his team in a practice session with the Mansfield Bears.

To match Brooklyn's head liner, "Stumpy" Thomason of Georgia Tech, Clark will trot out Mayes McClain, Haskell Indian and Iowa star who "Potsy" declares is the greatest Indian since Thorpe.

Depler will have Abbruzzino, Dowler and Yablouk of Colgate; Scialzi of Georgetown; McBride, Syracuse; Hanson, Temple; Vance, Texas, in addition to Thomason as backfield fodder.

Spartan backs include Persnell, Nebraska; Tony Holm, Alabama; Lumpkin, Georgia Tech; Clark, Colorado; Schwartz, Washington State; Cy Kahl, North Dakota; Stennett, California and Shelley, Texas.

A lineman himself, Depler is leaning hard on the support of Mooney, Georgetown; Lubratovich, Wisconsin, Watkins, Georgia Tech and Haines, Colgate can give him at tackle. He especially understands the tackle's importance and his viewpoint. At guards Depler can send in Gilson, Colgate; Fulton, Oglethorpe and Mielzinger, Carnegie Tech. Bultman, Marquette and Jonas, Utah, will alternate at center.

On the wings Depler will have such stellar performers as Nemecek, N. Y. U.; Stramello, Colgate; Tomaine, Georgetown and Wagner, Columbia.

At the tackles he can count on Douds, W. J.; Waters, Florida and Schleusner, Iowa. Emerson, Texas; Leo, Oklahoma; Bodenger, 'Iane; Armstrong, Missouri and Roberts, Iowa, make strong combinations at the guard posts. Center position is well taken care of by Clare Randolph, Indiana and Miller Wittenberg.

SQUAD WORKS FOR OPENER

Les and Good To Report Next Monday; Battle For Positions Is Expected.

Circleville high school is going to have a football team this year and from present indications it's going to be a good one. Extreme warm weather has put a crimp in Coach Fete Heberholz' plan but squad of enthusiastic lads is put through the paces every day—twice each day—and not one of them has put up a complaint. Several of the lettermen from last year's team have reported and two dependables upon whom Coach Heberholz is planning heavily will report as soon as school starts next Monday. They are George Les, last year's quarterback, and Medford Good, lineman, both of whom are working.

CANZONERI WHIPS BERG

Terrible Tony Rates Higher After Turning Back Britain; Carries Jack.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The shoes of Frank Erne, Bat Nelson, Joe Gans, Ad Wolgast and Benny Leonard are none too big today for Tony Canzoneri, worthy champion of the lightweight division.

The likeable little Italian, holder of the 135 pound and 140 pound titles and former bantamweight champion, proved his right to the purple robes last night when he administered a sound beating to Jack (Kid) Berg, Britain's best. It was the third and "rubber" meeting between the two rivals.

Canzoneri had all the attributes of a real champion—punching power, boxing ability, judgment of pace and stamina. The British buzzsaw, burned out by strenuous campaigning, was outclassed from every angle.

The champion was expected to retain his title—he was the favorite at odds varying from 12 to 5 to 3 to 1—but had been figured to win via the knockout route. Berg, who throws an average of 150 punches a round, had been conceded an excellent chance to win the decision if he could escape a knockout.

Great things are expected of a number of the boys this year, including Dean White, Bob Hundley, Freddie Smith, Bill Hegele, Dutch Hoffman, Merle Davis, Carl Purcell, Bill Robinson, Bob Griffith, and several others. Several other athletes may prove dark horses and take positions away from these lads. Paul Rooney, with much added strength, Paul Walld Thacher from Jacksonville, tall boy and fast, but lack experience, and several others promise of making things all for those who made letters this year.

Blocking and offensive plays are holding the center of the Tiger's attention.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11.—The first football "board of strategy" meeting at Ohio State university this season was called today by Coach Sam Willaman.

With the squad of 60 candidates due to report for their first practice on Tuesday, Willaman asked his coaching staff to meet for the first council of war on Monday.

In addition to last year's staff, Wesley Fesler and Dick Larkins, stars of the 1930 team, will attend the meeting. Both will be assistant coaches this season.

TIFFIN, O., Sept. 11.—Just as they were pinning away because they lost their two backfield giants, Dwight Haley and Otto Vokaty, by graduation, football coaches at Heidelberg college today received word that "Big John" Zippel of Oak Harbor probably will return to school this season.

"Big John," who weighs 200 pounds, was a star on the Heidelberg team in 1929 but did not return to school last year. His weight will be welcomed in the backfield because most of the ballcarriers will be light.

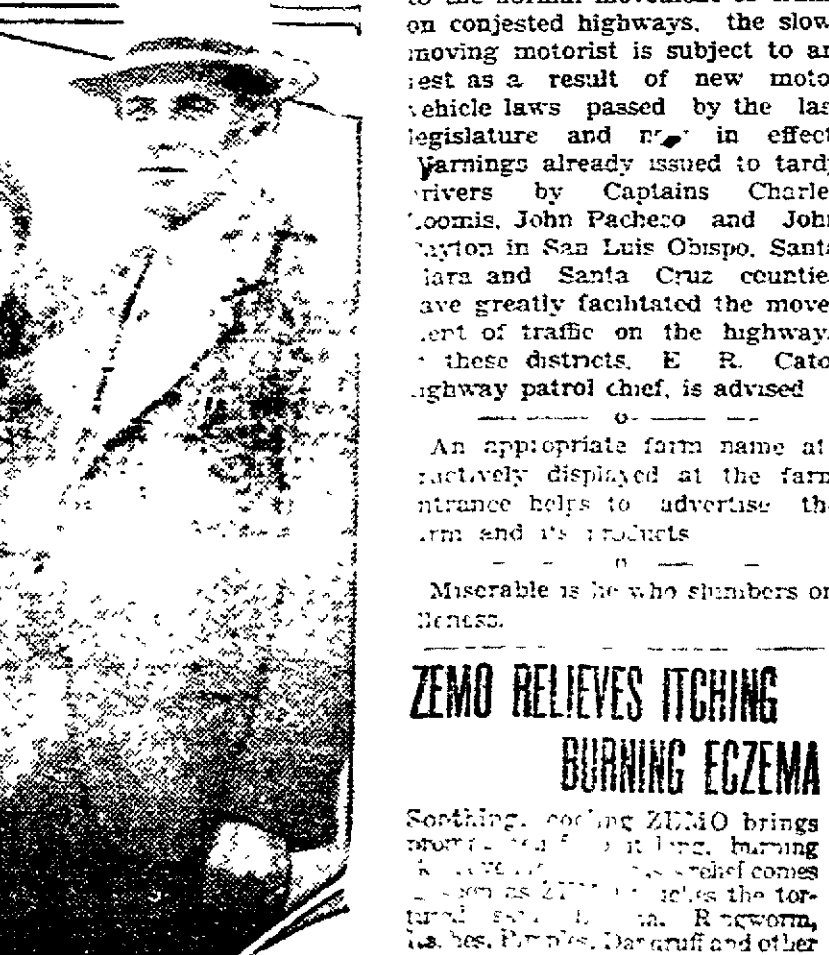

ATHENS, O., Sept. 11.—Placing heavy responsibility on two youths who have not yet won letters, Coach Don Peden of Ohio University today announced that either Bob Willoughby of Mt. Sterling or Harold Brown of Parkersburg, W. Va., will be "key men" in his complicated football offense this year.

KENT, O., Sept. 11.—Pessimism changed to optimism on the Kent State college campus today when it was discovered that four former football stars who were not in school last year will return this season.

Starting his seventh year as Kent State coach, M. E. Wagoner was elated to learn that Clarence Hinkle, Elmer Dunlavy and Eddie

Rudy's Bride Home for Visit

Here is Rudy Vallee's bride, the former Fay Webb, with her parents, Chief of Police and Mrs. Clarence Webb, at Santa Monica Cal., where the crooner's bride is visiting. Mrs. Vallee's health is said to have been threatened by the Eastern climate so the honeymoon was terminated for a visit to sunny California. Rudy was too busy in New York to make the trip.

Miami U. Has Squad of Sixty, Most of Whom Are Sophomores; To Play Pitt

OXFORD, O., Sept. 11.—Sixty candidates for the 1931 edition of the Miami University Redskins reported to Coach Chester Pittner for the first practice session of the season here this morning. Coach Pittner has a difficult assignment ahead of him, for graduation took a heavy toll of his veterans last spring and his reserves are none too strong. However, he will have the best squad of sophomores in years and with nine lettermen hopes to fashion a typical Redskin eleven.

The Redskins will have a distinct sophomoreish cast this year and the starting lineup will contain a majority of green players. Likely candidates are available for all positions with the exception of center and fullback, which will be filled by men shifted from other positions. The tentative lineup shows a considerable increase in weight over last year, when Miami had the lightest squad in the Buckeye.

Cartwright and Stryker, in the backfield, Corry, Niemi, and Fuston at the ends, and Evers, Horn, Vecchiello, and Strobel on the line are the returning lettermen. Likely looking sophomores include Stewart, Schmitt, Smith, Meyer, Gessner, Ott, and Oswald.

Miami opens with the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh on September 26. The schedule includes games with two of the three new Buckeye members, Wittenberg, and Wabash. Coach Pittner will be assisted by John Maue, Roy Wietz, and Melvin Dittmer, the same staff as last year. Two sessions a day until the university opens on September 15 are scheduled.

Miami's new gymnasium, just completed by the contractors and turned over to the University, will be used as headquarters by the football team.

Spartans Ready For Eastern 11

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 11.—With both squads boasting "mid-season" legs after a fortnight's strenuous training, Portsmouth's Spartans and Brooklyn's Dodgers are ready officially to kick the lid off National Pro League Football here Sunday afternoon in what promises to be the keenest fought season opener in League history.

Coaches in football's graduate game find few if any soft spots comparable to some of the "test Saturdays" which college mentors often write into their fall schedule. Every game has a meaning all its own when League standings are pertinent—a meaning which baseball managers, for instance, can laugh off easily enough sometimes when the boys are in a slump but one in which the pro football club bosses read the writing on the wall. With short seasons of eleven weeks and schedules of fifteen to eighteen games there can be no slumps.

In his determination to show his mates how to "take the lead and hold it" Spartan Coach, Geo. "Potsy" Clark trotted out twenty-two huskies with headgear early this week for a home-made game which went the full route. Potsy's "first" team pushed over four touchdowns with some hard running and mixed in two more via the aerial route. John C. Depler, another Zuppke trained product who coached Columbia's line for ten years before accepting his post as head coach of Brooklyn's Dodgers also served notice with a report of a 65 to 0 win by his team in a practice session with the Mansfield Bears.

To match Brooklyn's head liner, "Stumpy" Thomason of Georgia Tech, Clark will trot out Mayes McClain, Haskell Indian and Iowa star who "Potsy" declares is the greatest Indian since Thorpe.

Depler will have Abbruzzino, Dowler and Yabok of Colgate; Scalzi of Georgetown; McBride, Syracuse; Hanson, Temple; Vance, Texas, in addition to Thomason as backfield fodder.

Spartan backs include Persnell, Nebraska; Tony Holm, Alabama; Lumpkin, Georgia Tech; Clark, Colorado; Schwartz, Washington State; Cy Kahl, North Dakota; Stennett, California and Shelley, Texas.

A lineman himself, Depler is leaning hard on the support of Mooney, Georgetown; Lubratovich, Wisconsin; Watkins, Georgia Tech and Haines, Colgate can give him at tackle. He especially understands the tackle's importance and his viewpoint. At guards Depler can send in Gilson, Colgate; Fulton, Oglethorpe and Mielzinger, Carnegie Tech. Bultman, Marquette and Jonas, Utah, will alternate at center.

On the wings Depler will have such stellar performers as Nemecek, N. Y. U.; Stramello, Colgate, Tomaine, Georgetown and Wagner, Columbia.

At the tackles he can count on Douds, W. & J.; Waters, Emerson, Texas; Leo, Oklahoma; Bodenger, Maine; Armstrong, Missouri and Roberts, Iowa, make strong combinations at the guard posts. Center position is well taken care of by Clare Randolph, Indiana and Miller Wittenberg.

CANZONERI WHIPS BERG

Terrible Tony Rates Higher After Turning Back Britain; Carries Jack.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The shoes of Frank Erne, Bat Nelson, Joe Gans, Ad Wolgast and Benny Leonard are none too big today for Tony Canzoneri, worthy champion of the lightweight division.

The likeable little Italian, holder of the 135 pound and 140 pound titles and former bantamweight champion, proved his right to the purple robes last night when he administered a sound beating to Jack (Kid) Berg, Britain's best. It was the third and "rubber" meeting between the two rivals.

Canzoneri had all the attributes of a real champion—punching power, boxing ability, judgment of pace and stamina. The British buzzsaw, burned out by strenuous campaigning, was outclassed from every angle.

The champion was expected to retain his title—he was the favorite at odds varying from 12 to 5 to 3 to 1—but had been figured to win via the knockout route. Berg, who throws an average of 150 punches a round, had been conceding an excellent chance to win the decision if he could escape a knockout.

BIARRITZ—Carmen the Caddy was chasing golf-balls for the Prince of Wales while he was the house-guest of Lord Edman at the Chateau de Matignon, which lies on the lovely Basque coast between Bayonne and this famous seaside resort. Carmen is considered the very best of all the lady caddies on the coast—all the caddies are women around here. She is plump and middle-aged, a native of the region, with a curious Spanish infection to her French. About all the English she knows is a long-drawn out "oooooooooooo" for a fine shot, followed by a rapid fire of French, all of which never fails to encourage any player on the links.

SAY BRIDGE TO CAUSE DAMAGE

Pickaway-St Residents File Complaint, Seeking Damages of $1,200.

Charging that the construction of a new concrete bridge on N. Pickaway-st will cause irreparable damages to their property, Roy and Margaret Huffer, N. Pickaway-st residents, filed a complaint with the county commissioners, Friday, asking $1,200 damages.

The Huffers are owners of seventeen hundredths of an acre of land on the east side of Pickaway-st adjacent to the proposed bridge.

In part the petition filed with the commissioners is:

"The bridge will be a permanent obstruction in Pickaway-st; the bridge and approach will be elevated above the present grade of the bridge and street, and the home of the protestants will be irreparably damaged by the presence of the elevated approach and the elevation of the bridge. The travelled portion of the street will be elevated and widened, placing the improvements of the protestants below the level of the street."

"The street where elevation will be sloped gradually on the east side toward the home of the protestants and rain, melting snows and water will be diverted by the proposed improvement onto the lands of Mr. and Mrs. Huffer. The means of ingress and egress into and from the premises will be interfered with, if not entirely cut off. The improvements thereon, which have been made with reference to the grades that have been established and maintained for many years will be damaged."

Mr. and Mrs. Huffer claim damages of $1,200 and compensation for any land belonging to them that will be taken for the improvement.

The commissioners will study the complaint at their next meeting, Monday, but probably no action will be taken until the proposed bridge is constructed on Pickaway-st. It will then be known whether or not the complainants are entitled to the damages.

Sen. Bingham Uses Air to Keep Up Public Interest

Six-Foot Yankee Solon from Connecticut Leaves Oratory to Colleagues While He Attracts Notice in Sky; Pilot at 42

SEN. BINGHAM OFF FOR GOLF BY AUTOGYRO WITH PILOT JIM RAY

Rangy Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut practices the doctrine that if his colleagues wish to keep their constituents informed of their personality via the use of what has been sometimes termed "hot air" or, more politely, oratory, that's all right with him. But as for this six-foot-one Yankee solon, he prefers a different kind of air—the kind traversed by airplanes. Senator Bingham, who learned to fly when he was 42, and commanded the largest U. S. aviation instruction center in France during the war, believes in using the most up-to-date methods in keeping himself before his public. And one of these is aviation. He may be pictured flying from the Capitol to a golf links in an autogyro or "standing up" with a prominent air official when the knot is tied or any number of other adventures allied with flying. He's not only an aviation enthusiast, but he's using it to good advantage politically.

Southland Prepares For Influx Of Northerners

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Sept. 11.—With the passing of Labor Day, the last of the big summer holidays, thoughts of Pickaway-co tourists and vacationists will again turn to Florida, its balmy and invigorating climate, its outdoor educational and recreational facilities, its long calendar of smart social activities, and its annual introduction of fashionable styles to be worn in the ensuing Spring months.

Right now Florida is preparing for its biggest list of guests who will soon start the Southland trek by automobile over highways paved every mile of the way, by boat, airplane and rail.

Internationally known figures in the social, financial, business, literary and political world will again make seasonal visits to the Sunshine State, and St. Petersburg will, as usual, attract more than its share as in last season when famous artists and writers, United States Senators, army and navy officials, multi-millionaires, leaders in the sport world and social mentors were here participating in gay and colorful society events.

Pickaway-co was exceptionally well represented here last winter and most of the residents have already made arrangements to return here for a gay, healthful and happy sojourn in the sub-tropics. At the city information bureau, new illustrated booklets containing recently taken views of St. Petersburg are being mailed free to those writing in for them.

Among the Circleville residents who were here last winter and are included among those planning to return, are: I. B. Barnes; Mrs. J. W. Crist, Park-pl; Mrs. Nannie W. Foreman, S. Scioto-st.; J. W. Johnson, N. Court-st.; Mrs. Jessie F. Miller, Mound-st; and Mrs. Ellen Root, W. Ohio-st.
